imagined community: people who never meet each other still view themselves as part of the same community -> this is an act of imagination

"As Anderson argues, the idea of an imagined sovereignty is inherently a product of the enlightenment rejection of rule by divine right."

need something to unite us?

ad-question In small groups, brainstorm the different ways in which we might find evidence of community, trade routes?

similar laws in different areas macro: ideology similar goals / struggles - wanting to be a part of something - people have an inherent want to be a part of something better

- physical connection! - roads, etc. - which allows for trade! - called, internal market people had a "crisis of purpose" salem witch trials! yay... buncha explanations

1.1 | Building a Revolutionary Society: Ideology and Identity growth of material culture - erosion of deference - "listen to me because you will get my land when i die" - can't do so when there isn't enough land to do so

and, the great awakening

Aimed to revive man's relationship with God. Their purpose was to convince people that religious power if everyone can do their own thing, why don't we get anarcho-cannibalism?

- self mastery
 - virginians: what holds people together is virtue
 - have to be able to support yourself or else you lose that virtue
- jefferson: no one should be a wage earner, they should be able to support themselves
 - his def of freedom
